

I. COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course will provide students with a foundational understanding of human rights principles and practices which will enable students to form their own values, opinions and strategies for integrating a human rights framework in to their work as peace builders. The principles and ethics of advocacy will be discussed and fundamental human rights documents will be introduced and evaluated as useful tools for advocacy work. Students will be able to identify fundamental civil, political, social, cultural and economic rights for the purpose of promoting and protecting the fundamental rights and freedoms of the communities they serve. The history of the human rights movement will be studied and controversies in human rights such as universalism versus cultural relativism, human rights and the war on terror, and the enforceability of rights will be examined. The course will also explore the application of human rights principles and frameworks in a variety of contexts for students to understand the mechanisms of integrating a rights-based approach into their personal, professional and community lives.

Here are a few quotations that set the tone for Human Rights Advocacy...

“Today's human rights violations are the causes of tomorrow's conflicts.” (Mary Robinson)

“The Earth is the mother of all people and all people should have equal rights upon it.” (Chief Joseph)

“In the future, human rights will be increasingly a universal criterion for designing ethical systems.” (Mahnaz Afkhami)

“Peace, development and human rights are essentially inter-related, inter-dependent and indivisible.” (Theo van Boven)

“Peace can only last where human rights are respected, where the people are fed, and where individuals and nations are free.”
(14th Dalai Lama)

“The idea of cultural relativism is nothing but an excuse to violate human rights.” (Shirin Ebadi)
