PHILOSOPHY/GOALS:

This course is designed to give students an understanding of the mentally retarded in relation to today's society. With the trends of normalization and the focus on the needs of the mentally retarded, it is important that D.S.W. students view the influences in the community and the services available to meet these needs. This environmental awareness will facilitate students' ability to improve the quality of living for the developmentally handicapped in his/her environment.

This course will study the relationship of the retarded in his/her family, peers and community and his/her position to these at various levels of development. The social relationship of the developmentally handicapped individual to the community will be examined along with current issues related to the field of the developmentally handicapped.

TERMINAL/BEHAVIOURAL OBJECTIVES:

- a) Students will develop an understanding of the needs of the mentally retarded person and his/her family.
- b) Students will be able to compare traditional institutional services to developmental models.
- c) Students will be able to identify problems that occur with institutional change.
- d) Students will be able to analyze the normalization process.
- e) Students will be able to discuss both the myths and society's attitude toward sexuality and mental retardation.
- f) Each student will plan and present a seminar to the class.
