I. COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course focuses on the concepts of transpersonal teaching and learning and the phases in the teaching learning process as they relate to nursing care. It encourages participants to review the major teaching-learning and motivational theories and examine the assumptions underlying a variety of learning perspectives and methodologies. It considers the uniqueness of teaching and learning within a health/healing context, and through active reflection encourages participants to explore personal beliefs and values in relation to theoretical perspectives and personal experiences. The course will encourage the discussion of the relationship between caring and teaching and the phases of the interpersonal interactive process that need to occur for effective learning outcomes to be achieved. Through praxis and building on concepts in Professional Growth I and II, participants will have opportunities to experience a variety of teaching/learning encounters with a focus on prevention and health promotion, as both teacher and learner.

II. LEARNING OUTCOMES AND ELEMENTS OF THE PERFORMANCE:Ends-in-View

Opportunities will be provided for participants to experiment in teaching and learning and to explore and experience the role of health educator first hand with individuals and groups in a variety of contexts, including the clinical and community settings and microteaching labs with peers. Through thoughtful discussion and personal reflection participants will critique educational theories and their relevance to nursing. Throughout the course, the focus will be on personal meaning-making, and the personal and professional transitions that occur when we move freely back and forth as both learner and teacher with others.

Process

This course is designed as a “people” laboratory. As the designated faculty in this course, it is my intent that we work together to create a safe, caring community that will allow for free expression, critical examination, and creative risk-taking. I also recognize that all participants in the classroom will act as teachers. Our discussions and debate will include personal reflections on clinical experiences, paradigm cases that stay with us, as well as exploration of some of the classic and more provocative literature. Together we will try on different ways of being as both learner and teacher, and share our observations in active dialogue. And true to the nature of learning, what and how I learn will always be different than what you learn even if we are participating in the same activity. Each of us will modify what is presented or experienced through our own model of reality. That is why dialogue is so critical to course success.

If there are extenuating circumstances bearing upon a student's absence, the instructor should be notified. Absences in excess of 20% may jeopardize receipt of credit for the course.

VI. EVALUATION PROCESS/GRADING SYSTEM:

A passing grade of 60% is required for all nursing courses. The grade for Nursing 3056 will be based on three assignments related to teaching/learning. There is no examination in this course.
