I. PHILOSOPHY/GOALS

In this course, we will discuss the factors that influence "quality" of life for the aged population. Since people are living longer, the quality of life as they age becomes more important. Most of our population will have many more leisure years out of the workforce than ever before and the use of recreational time assumes new importance. With a longer life expectancy, such factors as health needs, housing, transportation, finances, family and community support systems become important issues. We will examine these factors and others throughout this course.

II. STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES (OUTCOMES);

1. To review demographic information related to the aged.
2. To identify the factors that influence the quality of life for the aged in our society.
3. To increase the student's understanding of the way in which these factors do influence the aging process and quality of life for the aging person.
4. To examine the interplay among these factors.
5. To discuss the myths and stereotypes of aging.
6. To discuss the issues of victimization of the aged and substance abuse in the aged.
